PLAY BALL! Kamp hits a homerun

In this corner, weighing in at 127 kampers, is the returning champion Kamp KACE. Kampers arrived in droves welcomed by an MVP lineup of cheerleaders, basketball players, and even Gumby. The new building and process streamlined the registration process faster than Usain Bolt in the 100m. After checking in, Kampers tossed gear in their bunks and headed down to spaghetti dinner to carbo load for the marathon week. After creating a game plan focused on water safety, the team proceeded to compete in a series of games called the eliminator, which included the river jump, dodge ball, and nukem just to name a few. It's amazing what Kamp KACE can pack into half a day and we're not even done yet. There was an ice cream bar served up by the Lions that received a mighty KACE thank you chant. The night ended with a campfire under the stars complete with everyone's favorite Kamp songs.

"Lake water is way better for your hair than shower water."

Vikings Draft New QB

The Minnesota Vikings claimed the biggest up-and-coming star Cannon Falk yesterday. Cannon is a huge Vikings fan and stated he was ecstatic to be a part of, what he expects to be, a Super Bowl win in 2019. The Viking front office stated, "we're looking for big things from this kid. He's named Cannon; he must be able to throw a football the length of the field. #rookie #byebyecousins #youlikethat?"

We put the F in Foreign Language

Kamp KACE staff was asked to refrain from future use of bad accents by the United Nations. The letter stated, we understand making camp fun for the kids is important, but these counselors really butchered most of them. When asked for their thoughts, Kamp KACE responded with Howay partner, put another shrimp on the barbie gent.
