Cabins 7 and D spent their extra hours at the late-night party scrubbing the dining hall from top to bottom while singing songs from Annie while they worked. #fakenews

Float like a Butterfly, Sting like a bee

It was a polar bear swimmer's dream morning. The sticky, 80-degree beginning to the day forced kampers out of bed and into the drink. You could tell from the start it was going to be a great day for water sports. Right after breakfast Dexter Werner stopped by for an awesome visit with us. Kampers finished up their art projects and hopefully remembered to put a name on them. In the afternoon

Dr. Kobrinsky did his annual talk with the kampers about growing up and living with the pains of cancer. The NDSU basketball girls hung out for the afternoon playing basketball and interacting with the kids. From this point on, everything focused on the dance. Kampers got their hair colored, nails painted, and make-up applied in the mansion and then avoided sweating until the first song dropped. When the sun went down, a fireworks display took place in the meadow, filled with "ohs" and "ahs" from an enthralled crowd.

Dance Decision Sparks Protest

Kamp KACE leaders made a decision to replace the dance, everyone's favorite part of the week, with knitting. The boys of cabin B would not stand for this and immediately began prepping for a picket line to protest the unfair act being targeted towards them. Signs, chanting, and lobbying counselors filled their day. Ultimately, the hard work paid off when the "no dance" proposal was defeated with a 34-10 vote at the daily council(or) meeting.

Kitchen Raid

A random act of kindness occurred in the kitchen counselor of Cabin 3. After completing a pre-raid to get ice cream the night before, they were ready to take on the dining hall. Donned all in black, the cabin set off to complete their mission. Aside from one hick-up at the Ga-Ga pit, the kampers successfully left thank you notes for our wonderful kitchen staff plastered all over the kitchen. #lovethefood #choosekindness
